WHEELING, JULY 4, 1895.

Our Country.

From the time when the poor and scattered colonies revolted against their unjust treatment by the British crown, an appeal to the patriotism of the American people has never failed on deaf ears if the appeal was accompanied by a call to arms. Men and money have always come forth in answer to the drum beat. This is much to our credit as a people, and we may be sure that the world has taken due notice thereof and will govern itself accordingly.

What has been will be again whenever the occasion shall arise. But war is not the normal state of civilized men and nations. Nor is that the most admirable form of patriotism which thinks of country only when the drums are beating and the fighting men are flocking to the national standard.

Patriotism in its best and most serviceable form is that which shows itself in civic virtue that is always alive, always aggressive, that never lets up on an excess, an abuse that menaces the public welfare. It is a good thing for a nation when its people are ready to defend its honor and its integrity against all comers; a better thing, because there is more use for it, when the people are ready to defend it against foes within and eager to purge it of internal disorders.

In the one hundred and nineteen years that have passed since the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed we have had our troubles, but in spite of them all we have shot ahead of other nations in wealth and in intelligence. Never before has the world seen under one government so many well-to-do people or so many people who can read and write.

This is an achievement of which we have a right to be proud. It has given us enviable distinction among all the nations that have inhabited the earth and left a history. In the face of all this it is strange that the people of this country are only beginning to see and to try to strengthen the weak point in our armor. It has only begun to be realized that in the matter of local government we are behind almost every nation of Europe.

Intelligent foreigners look upon our great cities and their bad government as so many menaces to the stability of the republic. They are unable to see how so many sinks of iniquity can exist—the small imitating as best they can the great—without sooner or later undermining and overturning the whole national structure.

We have begun, but only begun, to look to the matter of city government, and it is found to be about the most difficult problem we have to deal with. The civic conscience is hard to arouse, but it seems to be responding to the efforts of earnest men and the evident needs of the situation. This is not the heroic patriotism of war time, but it is patriotism of a high degree and has its own inestimable value.

Pushed to a conclusion it will remove a fruitful cause of national scandal and buttress the republic where it has been weakest. There can be no worthier resolve on Independence Day than to resolve to help on this good work, each in his own way, as best we may.

This year we get a taste of spring in July. This is some compensation for the spring we did not have.

Good Roads.
Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, is going ahead in earnest to supply itself with good roads. There will be a special tax levy for this purpose which will yield about $450,000 the first year. The work will be pushed until the county will have about 400 miles of first-class roads built to require little work on them for twenty years. It is the intention to abolish all tolls, so that the new roads shall be free as well as good. The surface will be macadam.

The first thing the commissioners did was to secure a capable engineer, chosen because of his fitness for the work, not because he had a pull. The chief engineer is to have assistants. Allegheny county is to be congratulated. The step she has taken will contribute not only to the pleasure and the convenience of her people, but as well to the prosperity of her tillers of the soil. The new departure means the abolition of the tax represented by bad roads, the heaviest tax that farmers pay.

It will be a fortunate day when West Virginia or any part of it shall follow this good example. West Virginia does much better than some other states. Ohio county in West Virginia has better roads than the neighboring county of Washington in Pennsylvania, but this does not cover modern requirements. The time will come when our farmers will demand that their principal highways shall be as good as any city street, and they will be willing to contribute to that end.

Farmers as a class have not taken hold of the good roads movement with as much enthusiasm as city people have, but they are waking up and in time will lay hold in earnest.

Bad Use of the Pardoning Power.
The governor should not have pardoned Harrison and Mager, the men who assaulted young O'Brien. The assault was in the highest degree cowardly and murderous. They fell on the young man because he had exercised the liberty of an American citizen, left the Democratic party and joined the Republicans, and took an active interest in his party's success.

They were tried before a Democratic judge. There were more Democrats than Republicans on the jury. There never was a fairer trial. The sentence was not excessive. Sixty days in jail was mild punishment for their offense.

Certainly the reputation of the offenders did not recommend them to the executive clemency, and it is not easy to imagine what did move the governor in their behalf. He should have allowed them to serve out their sentence, and he opens himself to condemnation for not doing it.

The executive seems to have regarded the pardons as being of so urgent necessity that he had them forwarded by telegraph—an official informality which the sheriff of Marshall county, with due regard to his duty, very properly refused to recognize. It will not hurt men of the stamp of these prisoners to await the coming of their pardons in due form.

These men are both under indictment for rioting on a railroad train in Marshall county. This is a felony. The fact is that they are guilty. It is to be presumed that they will be convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary. Will the governor pardon them again? Does he think Mager and Harrison the kind of people on whom the law should not lay its hand?

His pity of it is that the Fourth of July will burn somebody's house and somebody's fingers.

How About This, Mr. Howard?
It is more than a year since George Mager was indicted in Ohio county for assault with intent to kill. To this day he has not been tried. He is one of the men whom the governor has pardoned by telegraph for an outrageous assault on young Tom O'Brien. Perhaps the prosecuting attorney of Ohio county, who defended Mager in Marshall county, will now think it safe to try him. It may or may not be significant that the prosecuting attorney of Ohio county was the Democratic nominee for Congress in the campaign in which the assault on Mr. O'Brien was committed by these highly favored lawbreakers.

Have a good time to-day, so good that you can go to bed to-night with a good conscience.

When to Marry.
A woman, writing in a woman's paper, gives poverty as the reason for most long engagements. Men find the struggle for existence a hard one and hesitate to bring misery upon a family. If this be true it is very creditable to the men who hesitate. Is it true?
If statistics on the subject were available we think they would show more long engagements among the rich and the well-to-do than among the poor. Marriage is entered into by the poor with remarkable freedom. There seems to be little thought for the morrow.

Men and women marry because they want to marry, leaving the future to take care of itself. The man may be settled in no work from which he could expect a livelihood for himself, much less for a family, but the marriage is performed and the family comes. Misery comes also, but there is no thought of that on the wedding day.
Whether engagements to marry should be long or short depends so much on the circumstances of each case that no general law on the subject can be laid down; but this law may be laid down, that no man shall marry until he sees his way pretty clear to take care of a family. Where there is a shortage in the food supply marriage begins to look very much like a failure.

The really new woman will want a brand new man, or none at all, won't she? Look alive, young fellow, or you may be lost in the shuffle.

The Maryland Lynching.
Denton, Maryland, which has just been the scene of a lynching, is in the heart of an old and intelligent community, whose people should be as much attached to the ordinary proceeding of the law and should have as much respect for the courts of justice as any in the world. The man who was lynched was guilty, apparently, beyond a reasonable doubt, but dilatory proceedings in his behalf had not been exhausted. The lynchers were not willing to wait longer.

When all sorts of people come suddenly together in a new region, as on the frontier when we had a frontier, scenes of this kind were more to be expected, for in those new and rude communities the everyday life was a warfare in which the laws of civilized society were silent.
In a well settled community, where the machinery of the law is operative and justice is administered so as to command the popular respect, frontier scenes are without excuse and are not to be palliated.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

Col. Ivers Phillips of Boulder, Col., who is temporarily staying in Worcester, Mass., says that he is the oldest Mason in the United States. Mr. Phillips is 90 years old next month. He was made a Mason 10 days after he was 21 years old, making him a member of the order for almost 69 years.

Frost is just as severe as heat. A drop of air at a temperature of minus 180 degrees would freeze a hole through a person's hand quite as effectively as the same quantity of molten steel or lead would burn it through.

The English sparrows seem to have but just reached the Northwest. Seattle, Tacoma, and other cities along Puget sound complain that the pugnacious little bird is becoming a nuisance thereabouts.

A South Dakota farmer this season planted 100 acres of Russian sunflowers. These flowers are grown for the oil of their seeds, which is the nearest approach to olive oil, and commands a high price.

A young man, twenty-eight years old, weighing 496 pounds, died at Fortuna, Humboldt county, Cal., last week. He was six feet two inches high, and his immense bulk was systematically distributed.

When Shakespeare wrote his plays the English language was spoken by only 5,000,000 people. The number now who use English is 115,000,000, and more than half of them are in the United States.

At the moment a little girl in a Brooklyn public school was reciting a piece describing the fury of a storm, lightning struck, and killed her father a few blocks away.

A San Francisco fisherman, out after rock-cod, hooked a devil fish last week that was twenty-four feet long. He sold three of the tentacles to Italian restaurants.

White blackberries were a curiosity brought into America, (a), by a farmer a few days ago. They were identical with the ordinary blackberry in form and flavor.

Snow was flying in the air at Columbus, Wis., on June 27. It was not cold enough to freeze. This is something never before recorded there at this season.

A parade of 1,000 telegraph messengers, including the central telegraph office and the various district bands, was a recent attraction in Hyde Park, London.

Peaches were selling for ten cents a peck and cherries for a dollar a bushel in Georgia last week. The fruit crop of the state is the largest ever known.

Switzerland grants one divorce to every twenty-two marriages, as compared with one to 132 in Holland, and one to 577 in England.

Dunklin county, Mo., has a pig that travels back and forth from the island to Kennett, a distance of ten miles, every few weeks.

By the breaking down of a huge engine of the Illinois steel company's mill at Joliet, the whole mill must stop two weeks.

It is now a law in Pennsylvania that no sectarian garb shall be worn by teachers in the public schools.

LATE JOKES.

The sexton, a short, bony individual, tipped-toe to the church door and looked anxiously up and down the street. There was no one in sight—except an innocent, harmless, ragged tramp. The sexton looked at him a moment and hesitated. Finally he went forward, doubtfully, and touching Weary Walker on the shoulder, "I beg your pardon," he said, timidly, "but would you mind coming inside for a few moments? The minister wants to say 'My dear brethren,' and there's only me in the church."—Boston Budget.

Dick—I played a great joke on a blind man a little while ago. You know they say that in compensation for one's loss of vision the remaining senses are abnormally acute? Bob—So I've always heard. Dick—Well, I handed him an article, and after feeling it for ten or fifteen minutes he had to give it up. He couldn't tell whether it was a collar just from the laundry or only a buzz saw.—Boston Transcript.

Theodore—Tell me, now, what is the meaning of the expression, "pulling your leg"? Richard—I can't tell you in so many words; but I will illustrate. You haven't $10 about you that you can let me have for a week or two?—Boston Transcript.

Friend—Have you completed your novel? Author—Not yet, I am sorry to say. I have made six couples happy for life, but I have still an old general and a shoemaker's widow on my hands and somehow they won't match.—The Gentle Blade.

Jones—My wife went downtown on Wednesday and spent all she had except one cent. Smith—If she does as well as that on Wednesday, what would she do on a bargain day? Jones—Get it charged.—Buffalo Express.

Clerk—"Yes, sir! That's one of the best clocks we have in the store. It goes eight days without winding." Hayseed—"Is that so? How long do you figure she'll go when you do wind her up?"—Harper's Bazar.

Will you celebrate the Fourth of July? she asked of the young surgeon who has a future. "No," he replied; "I celebrate the 5th."—Washington Star.

PERSONAL POINTS.

It is said that Arthur Balfour, the new leader of the house of commons, never wears his hat in the house. When addressing the house he generally holds himself together by the lapels of his coat. He is an extremely nervous man, and moves about a good deal, both in his seat and on his feet. He is indefatigable, alert, well posted, fearless and generally good-humored in debate.

Secretary Olney will spend a portion of his vacation in Massachusetts, and will occasionally visit the President at Gray Gables. Such diplomatic affairs as need his attention will be sent to him. Assistant Secretary Uhl and Third Assistant Secretary Rockhill intend to spend the summer abroad. Second Assistant Adams will be in charge of the department during their absence.

The promised book of unpublished Ruskin drawings will appear in August. These sketches were made about fifty years ago, and their subjects are all Italian. Some are in color, and all will be produced in fac-simile.

Sir Henry Irving says that English women are singularly undemonstrative. Although women admire him greatly and often form the larger part of his audiences, he gets his applause almost entirely from the men.

The Danish painter, Tuxen, has gone to St. Petersburg, at the request of the czar, to finish a painting representing the wedding of the emperor and empress, which is to be presented to the queen of England.

Ex-Senator James Harlan, of Iowa, will probably receive the Republican nomination for governor. Mr. Harlan is the only surviving member of President Lincoln's cabinet. He was born August 25, 1820.

The resting place of the patriot martyr, Nathan Hale, has been improved and the monument over his grave restored by order of the Connecticut legislature.

Dr. H. B. Silliman, of Cohoes, N. Y., has given to the Presbyterian church of that town the sum of $50,000 for the erection of a new church.

George Washington was not college educated, but he accepted the degree of LL. D. from Harvard, Yale, Brown and Pennsylvania.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,
